matter, except, possing, monitor, see this discord lay in its very composition and in the fact that it was devised to serve certain rather loosely thought-out British interests. Initially, it was an attempt at some form of Arab unification under the Hashemite dynasty, an objective which the British Foreign Office favoured following the capitulation of the Vichy Government in Syria and Lebanon. Nuri es-Said, who knew better, proposed a union excluding Egypt and the Arabian Peninsula — going back, that is, to the Fertile Crescent project embracing Iraq, Syria, Lebanon. Transjordan and Palestine. This failed largely because of Egyptian opposition, as well as Ibn Saud's refusal to cooperate with any unification under his rivals, and the fears entertained by Syriana and Lebanese.

THE Arab League, in short, brought together unwilling partners with diametrically opposed interests. Iraq was interested in Syria and an outlet to the Mediterranean, while Egypt under Farouk ence more felt ready to play the role of empire builder and unifier of the Arab world. For this was by no means a and unifier of the Arab world. For this was by no means a new role for Cairo. An Egyptian professor of international relations — Y. Boutros Ghali—traces it back for several thousand years. Tuthmosis III (circa 1450 B.C.) was the first Pharaoh to introduce "a formal and consistent policy of military alliances with the various Asian kingdoms of the Middle East." his first Egyptian-Asiatic "League" lasted less than 100 years, however, its dissolution brought on by the invasion of Syria by the Khabui from the eastern desert (Iraq) and by the Hittites from the North.

brought Iraq into the West-ern-backed B ag h da d Pact, Cairo felt somewhat isolated — at least in the sense that it could no longer claim pre-eminence in the League. The political assaults that followed, tile discrediting of Nuri as an imperialist agent and the consequent political in-activity in which Baghdad consequent political in-ity in which Baghdad d itself, brought to Col er the rare achievement nexing Syria and helped consolidate himself in Asia. WASHINGTON.— The situation in Iraq is one of the subjects being discussed by President Elsenhower and Prime Minister Macmillans at Camp David, Maryland.

So far neither the U.S. nor Britain has done anything to save Iraq's oil for the West, and Saturday's conference will decide whether anything constructive can be done that will not backfire.

At the Middle East Institute's 13th annual conference here, Prof. Robert Loring Allen, Director of Research Projects at the University of Virginia, said that Russis "is faced with the dillemma in the Middle East which so often faced the Western countries in the past—damned if she does and damned if she do

LAW REPORT

In the Supreme Court Sitting as Court of Civil Appeals
Before the Deputy President
(Justice Cheshin), Justices
Gottein and Berisanens.
Estate of Arye Freier and Others, Appellants, v. Hans Bauman, Respondent (C.A.

Temant
The Supreme Court allowed an appeal against a judgment of the Tel Aviv District Court delivered on January 18, 1958
(in C.A. 126/87).
The respondent, Hans Bauman, rented a flat in Rehow Hess,
Tel Aviv, from the appellants.
The first consisted of three rooms, one of which Mr. Bauman used as a shop and two of which he used as dwelling quarters.
The appellants applied to the

which he used as dwelling quarters.

The appellants applied to the Tei Aviv Magistrates Court for an eviction order against Mr. Bauman ta respect of the two reoms used as dwelling quarters, altering that he had abandaned them and taken up restience in another fiel. The Magistrate found that the one room had in fact been let to Mr. Bauman for use as business premises and the two rooms for dwelling purposes and that Mr. Bauman had abandoned the latter in December, 1954. He therefore ordered him to easits the two rooms.

ter in December, 1864. He therefore ordered him to measts the two rooms.

Mr. Rauman appealed to the Tel Avy District Court, which declined to interfere with the Magistrate's factual findings, but held that the issue between the two parties centred on whether the flat had been let as one entity or whether the two sections — that intended for business premises and that for their ling premises — had been let on two separate entities of the same occasion. Having found, on the strength of the evidence, that the three rooms had been let as one entity, they held that as long as Mr. Bauman continued to occupy one room he could not be said to have abandoned the other two, pointing out that there might possibly be a cause of action arginst Mr. Bauman for breach of contract, in that he was using the other two rooms as business premises intended of as dwellings, for which purpose they had been let to him.

In the appeal to the Supreme Court, Mr. Kohler appeared for the sapellants and Mr. M. Merron and Miss Schmidt for the respondent.

consignt if the District Court had held that the respondent had not abandoned the two rooms in question but had continued to occupy them for business purposes, then they might have been correct in holding that the issue was not that the premists had been abandoned but that they were being used for a purpose other than that specified in the original agreement. However, the District Court had declined to interfere with the Magistrate's findings, and in accordance with these the respondent had in fact Turning next to the legal question, Justice Cheshin said that the tenants' protection laws do not apply when the premises are no longer occupied by the tanaot. HAIFA. — "Up to now the passage of Isr through the Suez Canal was a matter of politics lige, but now it has assumed economic importing to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry. Mr. M. Tsour, said here on Friday.

Speaking at the Maritime Cube on "exports as a condition for the maintenance of our living standard," he stressed that any interference with the passage of Israel-made goods through the Suez Canal was now a serious menace.

"Because their passage is now vital, the case for developing the harbour of Elilate assumes more weight and urgency," Mr. Trour ead.

To gear Elilat for loading 10,000-ton vessels witt, build cargo like potash, phosphates and sement, substantial investments would be needed, he said.

2 Chim-Avir Pilots Grounded Temporarily

The Minister of Transport, Mr. Moshe Carnel, has temporarily suspended the flying licences of two Chim-Avir pilots found guilty of violating flying regulations, the Ministry spokeaman amounced on Friday. The two flew longer hours each day than is permitted.

The suspension followed the Ministry investigation into the cause of the plane crash in which a pilot, Yosef Aharoni, was killed 10 days ago. It was found that Aharoni had worked more than the maximum number of consecutive hours allowed. The pilot's fatigue was given as a possible cause for the erash.

The company has in the meantime started to require pilots to sign a daily report of work hours. They are permitted to take to the air again only after their reports are checked. The company will also provide sleeping accommodation for pilots who work away from their main base.

As long as exports were a small percentage of our output, this might still be possible, but once they went beyond 80 per cent in certain commodities, such losses could not be recovered without a drastic reduction of our living standard, he said.

TELL AVIV. — The annual Purim battle between Queen Esther and the cow boys started early this year, as small fry in chape opened Purim week in this city on Priday afternoon by chasing girls dressed as Queen Esther round Diseagoff Circle. The innovation this year seems to be sparklers which lit up the streets at dusk. On Friday evening serpents, pirates and many in the dress of Asian countries could be seen emerging from taxis to go to the many private parties all over the city.

Masks are much more ela-borate this Jubilee year and Tel Avivians are spending more money on fancy dreas this Purim, shopkeepers say. Shop windows are full of de-corations and the Supermar-ket has converted the store into a "Shushan Basaar."

APPRECIATION

Musical life in this country is almost unimaginable without Thelma Yellin, and there is surely no music lover in Israel who has not enjoyed her beautiful playing. An ideal ensemble player, for warm tone and unfailingly musical phrasing went straight to the listener's heart. Her active intorest and expert advice helped to put the Jerusalem Chamber Music Society on the firm basis which it has enjoyed for years. We are poorer for her death.

Pan-Islam Trend

Mr. Alon reported that the Indian leaders identified themselves with the Arab Nationalist movement, but not with any single stream within it. He found Indian military leaders concerned at the trend in pan-Arabism towards pan-Islamism, and there were those who felt that a strong Israel served India's security interests. During a talk with the Indian Defence Minister, Mr. Krishna Menon, he had been compelled to "total defence" of Mr. Ben-Gurion. Mr. Menon bitterly criticized the Sinai Campaign, seeing it as "an attack on peaceful Arabs and a day-light robbery." The speaker reported that he told Mr. Menon 'there is one man responsible for Arab aggression and he is Krishna Menon, for the Arabs are always sure of your support whatever they do." Mr. Menon had protested that he wished to help bring about Israel-Arab peace.

In the past four years Mr. seat on the vote of the minority, the Herut members of the coalition. In the past four years, Mr. Levanon has practically handed over to Herut many of the most important responsibilities in the administration. Jaffa, in particular, has become the favourite hunting ground of Herat members. Its administration was first entrusted to the late Moshe Ichilov: today it is Mr. A. Shechterman. Mr. Levanon, the mayor, has been an ardent supporter of the General Zionist-Herut merger. He still believes in it, for he fears his own party alone will not be able to retain its position. Should Herut outstrip the General Zionists in the next Council — assuming the right wing retains control — Herut would not be bound to support Mr. Levanon as mayor. It is not unnatural, therefore, that the latter has been more insistently pro-Herut than Herut itself.
